I have long been obsessed with hunting down a reference to the very first college writing center (or, as would be more common in the early 20th century, writing laboratory or clinic). This bibliography is largely the result of that obsession. The ending time period is prior to the first publication of The Writing Lab Newsletter in April 1977 with the assumption that a dedicated publication on the topic of writing centers (and even more so with the launching of The Writing Center Journal in 1980) would tend offer a natural home and monopolize the articles. However, I was also interested in the various ways that writing centers/labs/clinics might be described in publications more general to the teaching of writing and to secondary and higher education. I cannot say that these earliest articles provide definitive proof of the very first writing center; I know enough from conducting this kind of literature review that I might have simply not found that article or, even more likely, those creators saw no reason to publish their accomplishment. I can also attest that in no way is this bibliography comprehensive. My searching is limited by the bibliographic tools at my disposal as well as my biases towards what constitutes a genuine reference to an early writing laboratory or clinic, versus what seemed like a convenient descriptor of something else entirely. Nevertheless, references in this list do tell a variety of stories about the origins of writing centers.

One story is a tale of longevity. An initial impetus for my search was that we simply had very little knowledge of writing center history (an exception being Peter Carino’s work in “Early Writing Centers: Toward a History,” Writing Center Journal 15.2 [1995]: 103-115, and “Open Admissions and the Construction of Writing Center History: A Tale of Three Models,” Writing Center Journal 17.1 [1996]: 30-48). As the historical range of these entries shows, writing centers in one form or another have been around for a very long time. In fact, six of the first seven meetings of the Conference on College Composition and Communication (starting in 1949) featured workshops on writing laboratories, and they were such an established presence that by 1958, James Ruoff could satirize them in “The English Clinic at Flounder College” (College English 19.8 [1958]: 348-351).

Here’s a couple of other ways I read these stories: In her history of writing centers, Elizabeth Boquet (“‘Our Little Secret’: A History of Writing Centers, Pre- to Post-Open Admissions,” College Composition and Communication 50.3 [Feb. 1999]: 463-482) draws the distinction between writing centers as site or “place” and writing centers as teaching method or “pedagogy.” This place-pedagogy distinction offers a powerful organizing scheme for the accounts represented in this bibliography, particularly as writing centers moved from primarily a pedagogy—often described as “the laboratory method of teaching English”—to stand-alone spaces supplementing the instruction that students might (or might not) be getting in composition classes. Thus, in terms of pedagogy, those who ran early writing laboratories or clinics could define their operations in contrast to classroom teaching, such as at the 1950 CCCC pre-conference workshop, which reported that “the writing laboratory should be what the classroom often is not—natural, realistic, and friendly” (“Organization and Use of a Writing Laboratory: The Report of Workshop No. 9,” College Composition and Communication 02.1 [1951]: 17-18).

By the 1970s, writing centers were well established as institutional spaces, perhaps at the cost of seeing their value as pedagogical sites with much to teach the rest of the institution. Both the writing centers as a place and as a kind of pedagogy offer a contrast to what was seen as dominant classroom practices, and the entries in this bibliography consistently capture that contrast.

My other way of reading these histories is through the continuum of writing centers as punishment versus writing centers as possibility (for more on this idea, see Neal Lerner, “Punishment and Possibility: Representing Writing Centers, 1939-1970,” Composition Studies 31 [Fall 2003]: 53-72). This distinction captures the long-standing attitudes of faculty and administrators toward students under-prepared for college-level writing: Should they be punished, quarantined or assigned to the “Awkward Squad” as at Yale in 1929 or does their lack of preparation offer possibilities for experimentation and “individual teaching” as Preston Search asserted in 1894? Thus, this bibliography is not merely a way to capture the phenomenon of one-to-one instruction in writing over time, but also a view of cycles of blame and responsibility in the history of higher education’s relationship to under-prepared students. Writing laboratories, clinics, and centers are intertwined with the tension between opportunity and excellence, and as this bibliography demonstrates, that tension is not new; certainly, it is also far from resolved.

Search, Preston W.

Individual teaching: The Pueblo plan

Educational Review 07.2 (1894), 54-57

Not about English composition or writing laboratories/clinics per se, but Search, Superintendent of Schools in Pueblo, CO, offers one of the earliest accounts of setting up a high school according to students’ “individual needs”: “The work is now conducted largely by what may be called laboratory methods” (157-158).

KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, laboratory-method, school, Pueblo, Colorado, individual, USA
MacClean, George E.

English at the University of Minnesota

In Payne, William Morton (Ed.), English in American Universities; Boston, MA: DC Heath (1895), 155-161

One of 20 accounts reprinted from a 1894 series in The Dial magazine. Reports that “as regards methods of instruction we are eclectic. At some point we endeavor to illustrate by experiment every method, ancient and modern. If one term had to be used, the ‘laboratory method’ would describe ours” (158).

KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, laboratory-method, pedagogy, University of Minnesota, USA

Lewis, Frances W.

The qualifications of the English teacher

Education 23 (1902),15-26

High-school account describes classroom pedagogy as follows: “Class-room work, once entirely recitation from a text-book, is now often on the laboratory plan, with questions to lead the pupil to make his own discoveries and form his own opinions” (15).

KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, high-school, pedagogy, laboratory-method

Buck, Philo Melvyn

Laboratory method in English composition

Journal of the Proceedings and Addresses of the 43rd Annual Meeting of the National Education Association (1904), 506-510

A high school English department head calls for laboratory methods to make the students interested in the subject.

KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, high-school, laboratory-method, student-interest
Hopkins, Edwin M.

Can good composition teaching be done under present conditions?

English Journal 01.1 (1912), 1-9

Hopkins describes English composition as a “laboratory subject,” which has resulted in vast overwork for instructors.

KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, laboratory-method, teaching-load

Anonymous

Shall “laboratory work” in composition be given up?

English Journal 01.1 (1912), 48

An anonymous editorial, which calls for continuing commitment to composition as a “laboratory subject.”

KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, laboratory-method, pedagogy, abolition

Walker, Francis Ingold

The laboratory system in English

English Journal 06.7 (1917), 445-453

Description of a high school English teacher’s use of a “laboratory system” in which students work in small sections with peer review and instructor feedback.

KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, high-school, laboratory-method, peer-evaluation, response, small-group

Ziegler, Carl W.

Laboratory method in English teaching

English Journal 08.3 (1919), 143-153
A high-school teacher describes teaching English by having students create their own texts and offer peer review.

KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, laboratory-method, high-school, peer-evaluation

Douglas, Lucile

Teaching English on the Dalton Plan

English Journal 13 (1924), 335-340

High-school account of application of the Dalton Plan, particularly individual teacher-student conferences (the Dalton Laboratory Plan was a British educational approach that eliminated class hours, set contracted individualized projects, and emphasized one-on-one teacher and student interaction).

KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, Dalton plan, laboratory-method, conferencing, individual, pedagogy

Stauffer, Emily C.

A laboratory experiment in English composition

English Journal 14.1 (1925), 27-31

A high school account in which students have one-to-one conferences during class time.

KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, USA, high-school, conferencing, classroom, laboratory-method

Hargrave, Mary

The Dalton Plan in practice

English Journal 17 (1928), 372-380

High-school account of application of the Dalton Laboratory Plan to English classes (see Lucile Douglas, 1924).

KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, USA, Dalton plan, pedagogy
Holcomb, E. L.

The English laboratory

English Journal 17 (1928), 50-52

High-school account of a proposed ideal English classroom, “our workroom, our laboratory,” that sounds a lot like a contemporary writing center

KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, USA, pedagogy, laboratory-method, high-school

Horner, Warren B.

The economy of the laboratory method

English Journal 18 (1929), 214-221

Research on the “efficacy of the laboratory method of teaching English composition as compared with the recitation method” (p. 214) in a West Virginia high school. Results were pretty much the same, but laboratory students accomplished similar gains in about half the time (primarily correction of errors).

KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, USA, laboratory-method, West Virginian, high-school, data, gain, error-correction

Taylor, Warner

A national survey of conditions in freshman English (Bureau of Educational Research Bulletin, No. 11)

Madison, WI: University of Wisconsin, Bureau of Educational Research (1929)

First mention of “English clinics”: “In theory the project is excellent; in practice it may prove little value through the lack of cooperation accorded by departments other than English” (p. 31).

KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, USA, survey, data, FYC, ‘clinic’, theory-practice
Noyes, E. S.

The program of the Awkward Squad

English Journal 18 (1929), 678-680

At Yale, “Freshmen who are considered deficient in writing are assigned to the Awkward Squad” (p. 678) rather than required to take a class.

KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, USA, Yale University, FYC, basic, ‘awkward squad’, requirement

Wheeler, Paul Mowbray

Advanced English composition: A laboratory course

English Journal 19 (1930), 557-566

At Johns Hopkins, a laboratory course is offered for advanced English composition.

KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, USA, laboratory-method, advanced, Johns Hopkins University

Peck, Juanita Small

The English laboratory

English Journal 23.9 (1934), 751-764

An ideal laboratory description focusing on reading and enacting drama and literature.

KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, USA, laboratory-method, literature-course, pedagogy, dramatization, reading

Hicks, Frances Ross

Laboratory-recitations in English composition

The Nation’s Schools 15.1 (1935), 31-32
A description of the English laboratory at Murray State Teachers College in Murray, Kentucky. Laboratory is adjunct to composition class.

KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, USA, Murray State Teachers College, FYC, laboratory-method, recitation, ancillary

Scheide, Mable

The English laboratory

The Texas Outlook 19.5 (1935), 24-25

Describes a high-school classroom (and includes photos) in which students do not listen to lecture but work on their writing.

KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, USA, high-school, laboratory-method, Texas

Fenn, Henry C.

My city: An English laboratory assignment

English Journal 25.9 (1936), 727-733

High-school account in which “the classroom became for once a genuine laboratory for life instead of a demonstration desk for intellectual curiosa” (p. 733).

KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, USA, high-school, classroom, laboratory-method, assignment

Appel, Francis S.

A writing laboratory

Journal of Higher Education 07 (1936), 71-77

Appel, the first director of the University of Minnesota General College Writing Laboratory, created in 1932, describes the setup and usage.

KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, USA, laboratory-method, University of Minnesota
Grandy, Adah G.

A writing laboratory

English Journal 25.5 (1936), 372-376

Describes the writing laboratory at the University of Minnesota College of Science, Literature, and Arts (for the Minnesota General College Writing Laboratory, see Appel, 1936).

KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, USA, University of Minnesota, laboratory-method, pedagogy

Heaton, Kenneth L.; G. Robert Koopman

A college curriculum based on functional needs of students: An experiment with the General College Curriculum at Central State Teachers College, Mt. Pleasant, Michigan

Chicago, IL: University of Chicago Press (1936)

Describes the use of a writing laboratory in which students are writing for any course or outside of school needs (p. 63).

KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, USA, Central State Teachers College, Michigan, laboratory-method

Ferster, Teresa

An English laboratory for freshman

English Journal 26 (1937), 729-734

An account of a three-day experiment using laboratory principles at Ironwood Junior College, Michigan.

KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, USA, Ironwood Junior College, two-year, Michigan, FYC, ancillary
McGhee, Paul A.

Traces the growth of a writing center

New York Times (January 30, 1938), 40

Describes New York University’s Washington Square Writing Center, which is focused primarily on professional writing for publication.

KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, USA, New York University, publishing

Grove, W. Alan

Freshman composition: Its great middle class

College English 01.3 (1939), 227-236

Account of writing lab at Miami University of Ohio, targeted at remedial students and containing largely drill-and-practice exercises.

KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, USA, Miami University of Ohio, basic, drill, exercise

Wise, J. Hooper

A comprehensive freshman English course in operation

English Journal 28 (1939), 450-460

Describes the writing laboratory at the University of Florida General College, which was created in 1934.

KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, USA, University of Florida

Fountain, Alvin M.

The problem of the poorly prepared student

College English 01.4 (1940), 309-322
A survey of engineering colleges nationwide with several reporting writing labs; author’s attitude toward remedial students is elitist and hostile.

KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, USA, basic, placement, curriculum, survey, engineering college, data

Colby, Elbridge

“Laboratory work” in English.

College English 02.1 (1940), 67-69

Account of the lab at George Washington University.

KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, USA, basic, George Washington University, laboratory-method

Wonnberger, Carl G.

A laboratory plan in English

English Journal 29.5 (1940), 400-403

High-school account of institution laboratory methods to teach writing.

KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, USA, laboratory-method, high-school, WAC

Anonymous

Writing laboratory set up for students.

New York Times (January 21, 1940), 45

Describes the George Washington University Writing Laboratory, created in a new library building and serving composition students.

KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, USA, George Washington University
Anonymous

NYU expands language course

New York Times (July 28, 1940), 34

The New York University Writing Center has instituted a 60% increase in “courses dealing with English grammar,” aimed primarily at adult students.

KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, USA, New York University, wcenter-use, data, grammar, adult-ed

Scudder, Harold H.; Robert G. Webster

The New Hampshire plan for freshman English.

College English 02.5 (1941), 492-498

Report on abolishing first-year composition and replacing it with the laboratory approach.

KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, USA, abolition, FYC, laboratory-method, University of New Hampshire

Wise, J. Hooper

Writing laboratory in English courses

In Russell, John Dale (Ed.), New Frontiers in Collegiate Instruction; Chicago, IL: University of Chicago Press (1941), 161-169

A description of the University of Florida writing laboratory, part of the “comprehensive English course.”

KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, USA, University of Florida, communications-course
Howard, Jesse

The problem of English composition in American colleges and universities—Part I: A summary of recent literature on the teaching of composition

University of Illinois Bulletin 38 (1941), 9-62

The Writing Laboratory is reported as a “large scale reorganization” and “one of the more popular methods for attacking the problem of undergraduate use of English” (p. 25).

KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, USA, FYC, bibliography, practice, change, department

Roberts, Charles Walter

The problem of English composition in American colleges and universities—Part 2: A survey of requirements in English composition

University of Illinois Bulletin 38 (1941), 65-94

Reports on clinics and laboratories as relatively common and with varying approaches.

KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, USA, survey, data, requirement

Kelly, Dorothy

A high school laboratory

English Journal 30.8 (1941), 660-662

An account of two high schools that use a writing laboratory outside of regular instructional time.

KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, USA, high-school, practice

Campbell, Elizabeth M.

The evolution of a writing laboratory

College English 03.4 (1942), 399-403
Account of laboratory approach to replace first-year composition at Park College in Missouri.

KEYWORDS: Park College (Missouri), FYC, wcenter, abolition, wcenter, history

Grey, Lennox; Merritt Y. Hughes; Fred W. Lorch; George B. Parks

National Council of Teachers of English college section

College English 03.6 (1942), 584-586

Report of a survey of composition practices. Both clinics and labs are reported.

KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, USA, survey, practice, ‘clinic’, ‘lab’, FYC, data

Stanley, Carrie Ellen

This game of writing: A study in remedial English

College English 04.7 (1943), 423-428

Report on the writing laboratory at Iowa State University to deal with remediation. Lab was first created in the 1930s.

KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, USA, Iowa State University, basic

Mallam, Duncan

A writing clinic at Iowa State University.

School and Society 57.1 (January 9, 1943), 51-53

Clinic is available to all students except freshman.

KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, USA, Iowa State University, practice, requirement, advanced
Anonymous

Education notes

New York Times (March 12, 1944), E9

Clarkson College of Technology (Potsdam, New York) reports the creation of a writing laboratory in the English department.

KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, USA, Clarkson College of Technology (New York)

Potthoff, Edward F.

The program for improving students’ use of English at University of Illinois

College English 07.3 (1945), 158-163

Notes that the University of Illinois Writing Clinic was established in the fall of 1944. It was “open on a purely voluntary basis to any student in the university” (p. 162).

KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, USA, curriculum, rising-junior, sequence, advanced, University of Illinois

Johnson, W. G.

A report on the University of Illinois experimental writing clinic

Illinois English Bulletin 33 (October, 1945), 9-13

An account of the University of Illinois Writing Clinic, founded in 1944.

KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, USA, University of Illinois, experimental

Moore, Robert H.

The upperclass remedial English courses at the University of Illinois

Illinois English Bulletin 33 (October, 1945), 5-9
Moore describes the University of Illinois writing clinic, designed to augment a class for students who don’t pass a writing proficiency exam.

KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, USA, rising-junior, upper-division, basic, University of Illinois, objective, assessment

Bailey, J. O.

Remedial composition for advanced students

College English 08.3 (1946), 145-148

Describes the “CC Laboratory” at University of North Carolina. CC stands for “composition condition.”

KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, USA, deterioration, rising-junior, University of North Carolina, advanced

Potthoff, Edward F.

The program for improving students’ use of English at the University of Illinois

Illinois English Bulletin 33 (April, 1946), 1-8

Potthoff describes various aspects of the University of Illinois program, including a writing clinic.

KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, USA, curriculum, sequence, rising-junior, advanced, University of Illinois

Wiksell, Wesley

The communications program at Stephens College

College English 09.3 (1947), 143-148

Describes a writing clinic at Stephens College (Columbia, Missouri) that is part of a communications version of first-year composition. Also mentions reading and speech clinics.
KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, USA, FYC, academic, exemption, staffing, Stephens College (Missouri)

Loy, William D.

A new approach

College English 09.3 (1947), 206-212

Describes “individual conferences with the student in the laboratory” (p. 209) as a component of first-year composition at Michigan State University.

KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, USA, WWII, communications-course, sequence, speak-write, gen-ed, FYC, workshop, Michigan State University, conferencing, individual

Halsey, James H.

Universal English at University of Bridgeport

Higher Education 04.15 (1948), 178-179

Describes a “Universal English Clinic” which gives individual instruction to “persistent offenders.”

KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, USA, curriculum, objective, program, FYC, University of Bridgeport

Mathews, Ernst G.

Remedial English for upperclassmen at the University of Illinois

Illinois English Bulletin 33 (November, 1948), 7-8

Describes Rhetoric 200, a required class for students who fail a writing proficiency exam.

KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, USA, upper-division, basic-skills, deterioration, basic, University of Illinois
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Author</th>
<th>Title</th>
<th>Source</th>
<th>Page(s)</th>
<th>Summary</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Moore, Robert H.</td>
<td>The University of Illinois writing clinic</td>
<td>Illinois English Bulletin 36 (November, 1948), 9-11</td>
<td></td>
<td>Moore describes the University of Illinois writing clinic, which he was directing as a PhD student.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, USA, University of Illinois, TA-as-administrator</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bowman, Francis E.</td>
<td>Duke junior English examination</td>
<td>South Atlantic Bulletin 14.4 (March, 1949), 13-14</td>
<td></td>
<td>Upperclassmen at Duke University found “deficient in English” are assigned to a non-credit Writing Laboratory.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, USA, Duke University, rising-junior, junior-level, upper-division, assessment</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, USA, wcenter-design, wcenter-use</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Drake, Francis E.</td>
<td>Developmental writing</td>
<td>College Composition and Communication 01.4 (1950), 3-6</td>
<td></td>
<td>Use of peer-feedback system at the United States Air Force Special Staff School.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>KEYWORDS: basic, wcenter, history, USA, Air Force Special Staff School, peer-evaluation, military</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>---</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>McCloskey, Frank H.; Lillian Herlands Hornstein</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Subfreshman composition—a new solution</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>College English 11.6 (1950), 331-339</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Report on the “booster” system at New York University, similar to contemporary writing centers.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, USA, basic, ‘subfreshman’, conferencing, ancillary, ‘booster system’, New York University, FYC</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Moore, Robert H.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The writing clinic and the writing laboratory</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>College English 11.7 (1950), 388-393</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>An article used by some contemporary writing-center scholars to describe writing-center history; Moore describes laboratories and clinics as “remedial agencies for removing students’ deficiencies in composition.”</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, USA, basic, survey, data, frequency, tutoring, diagnosis</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hays, Edna</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The college teaching of English: A bibliography</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>College English 11.8 (1950), 433-455</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Includes references to Moore’s 1948 Illinois English Bulletin article.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>KEYWORDS: bibliography, annotated, curriculum, articulation, FYC, reading, language, lit crit, humanities, comskills, speech, journalism, engineering, WWII, English-ed, wcenter</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Marmon, Ina

A laboratory method for English

California Journal of Secondary Education 25.5 (1950), 268-270

At Stockton College, California a two-hour laboratory period offers individual and small-group instruction in writing.

KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, USA, laboratory-method, Stockton College, individual, small-group

Anonymous

Composition clinic at Wayne

Higher Education 07.2 (September 15, 1950), 23

Wayne University will allow faculty to assign juniors and seniors to the clinic until they have achieved “a clean bill of health.”

KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, USA, Wayne University, upper-division, assessment, basic, deterioration

Anonymous

Organization and use of a writing laboratory: Report of Workshop No. 9

College Composition and Communication 02.4 (1951), 17-18

Report of a College Composition and Communication Conference workshop.

KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, USA

Hudson, Wilson M.

Maintaining standards of English in all college courses

College English 12.7 (1951), 404-406

WPA-CompPile Research Bibliographies No. 9 <http://comppile.org/wpa/bibliographies>
Describes a writing laboratory for remediation at the University of Texas.

KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, USA, University of Texas, standards, WAC, deterioration

Maize, Ray C.

The partner method of review at the Air Command and Staff School

College English 12.7 (1951), 396-399

Describes the same program as did Francis E. Drake in College Composition and Communication in 1950. Peer-review is precursor to the contemporary writing center.

KEYWORDS: peer, readability, wcenter, USA, Air Command and Staff School, peer-evaluation

Stevenson, Hazel Allison

Facing the problem in upperclass English

College English 13.1 (1951), 32-37

Describes a writing clinic for remediation of college juniors, as well as a class for an “English Service,” akin to contemporary writing centers.

KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, USA, advanced, upper-division, deterioration, junior-level, basic

Kafka, Andrew K.

The writing laboratory

Journal of Higher Education 06.22 (1951), 328-330

Describes the creation of a writing laboratory, outside of regular class meetings, for individual writing instruction.

KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, USA, individualized, tutoring
Sasser, Earl L.

Some aspects of freshman English

College Composition and Communication 03.3 (1952), 12-14

Survey of 123 institutions shows “clinic service available” at 41 (36%).

KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, USA, survey, FYC, data

Anonymous

The writing laboratory: The report of Workshop No. 9

College Composition and Communication 03.4 (1952), 23-25

Report of a College Composition and Communication workshop.

KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, USA

McEwen, Gilbert D.

College spelling clinic

College English 13.4 (1952), 216-218

An example of how far one might take the idea of specialized “clinics” to deal with the “building blocks” of language.

KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, USA, spelling, specialized, grammar

Mallam, Duncan

Progress report on a writing clinic

School and Society 75 (June 14, 1952), 374-375

The Iowa State Writing Clinic is now 11 years old and still primarily for remediating upper-division students.

---

WPA-CompPile Research Bibliographies No. 9 <http://comppile.org/wpa/bibliographies>
KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, USA, spelling, specialized, grammar

Anonymous

Clinical aids to freshman English: Report of Workshop No. 14

College Composition and Communication 04.3 (1953), 102-103

Report of a College Composition and Communication Conference workshop.

KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, USA, FYC

Wise, J. Hooper

The comprehensive freshman English course—reading, speaking and writing—at the University of Florida

College Composition and Communication 04.4 (1953), 131-135

Each student assigned to this course works in the Writing Laboratory for two hours per week.

KEYWORDS: FYC, comskills, reading, speaking, University of Florida, ancillary, wcenter, history, USA, communications-course

Mills, Barriss

Writing as process

College English 15.1 (1953), 19-26

The author, affiliated with Purdue and the chair of the College Section of the National Council of Teachers of English, lays out a strong justification for teaching the “process,” rather than focusing on the product. He notes that “some sort of laboratory approach seems to be the best method” because “laboratory methods also make possible a more or less continuous co-operation between student and teacher during all steps in the writing process” (p. 25).

KEYWORDS: process-product, MX, laboratory-method, wcenter, pedagogy, teacher-student
Lawson, Strang

The Colgate plan for improving student writing

Association of American Colleges Bulletin 39.2 (1953), 288-290

- Describes a writing laboratory at Colgate College to which composition students can be referred.

- KEYWORDS: Colgate University, program, change, FYC, volume-of-writing, wcenter

Unglesby, Ina Hunter

Remedial writing programs

School and Society 78.2 (September 19, 1953), 89-91

- Survey of 21 colleges and universities; found fairly extensive use of clinic/laboratory services for remediation.

- KEYWORDS: wcenter, basic, program, survey, wcenter, data

Limpus, Robert

The freshman program at Western Michigan College

College Composition and Communication 05.1 (1954), 3-8

- “Writing Laboratory” is a course for top-percentile students.

- KEYWORDS: FYC, Western Michigan College, laboratory-method, wcenter, high-low, gifted

Maize, Ray C.

A writing laboratory for retarded students

College English 16.1 (1954), 44-48
Reports on experimental results of students assigned to a “writing laboratory” versus those assigned to standard remedial section. Laboratory sections outperformed others on most measures.

KEYWORDS: basic, wcenter, contrast-group, practice, workbook, drill, group, conferencing, data, gain

Creek, Herbert L.

Forty years of composition teaching

College Composition and Communication 06.1 (1955), 4-10

“Writing clinics for feeble students were established here and there.”

KEYWORDS: pedagogy, history, 20th-century, profession, wcenter, basic

Anonymous

Writing clinics: The report of Workshop No. 2

College Composition and Communication 06.3 (1955), 125-126

Report of a College Composition and Communication Conference workshop.

KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, USA

Peery, William

Freshman English and the enrollment bulge

Association of American Colleges Bulletin 41.4 (1955), 575-583

Describes the use of laboratory methods at the University of Texas during WWII to deal with very large enrollments.

KEYWORDS: University of Texas, population, lecture, class-size, break-out, wcenter, teacher-training, data, contrast-group, quality, enrollment, WWII, history
Anonymous

Skills laboratories for any student

College Composition and Communication 07.3 (1956), 143-144

Report of a College Composition and Communication Conference workshop.

KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, USA, skill-level

Millet, Stanton; James L. Morton

The writing laboratory at Indiana University

College English 18.1 (1956), 38-39

What is described is very similar to contemporary writing centers.

KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, USA, Indiana University

Anonymous

Has English Zero seen its day?—a symposium

College Composition and Communication 08.2 (1957), 72-95

Accounts of writing laboratories at Colgate University and University of Tennessee (see Strang Lawson, 1953).

KEYWORDS: profession, change, basic, decline, 'subfreshman', first-year, underprepared, teacher-opinion, Colgate University, University of Tennessee, wcenter

Dabbs, Lowell

A report on remedial English in the colleges

Junior College Journal 27.7 (1957), 381-387

Mentions the “Laboratory Method” as a popular way of dealing with remediation, and warns of a critical of lack of attention to grammar drill with such a technique.
KEYWORDS: two-year, basic, survey, skill-level, data, placement, sentence, ancillary, pedagogy, teacher-training, grammar, linguistics, sentence, appositive, absolute, laboratory-method, wcenter, drill

Ernst, Catherine Tully

A main argument

College Composition and Communication 09.1 (1958), 32-33

Account of the “Workshop Program” at Brooklyn College—a writing-center approach.

KEYWORDS: wcenter, history, USA, Brooklyn College, workshopping

Wykoff, George S.

Current solutions for teaching maximum numbers with limited faculty

College Composition and Communication 09.2 (1958), 76-80

The “Writing Laboratory Plan” is noted as a “more effective use of personnel” in a time of increased enrollments.

KEYWORDS: work-load, class-size, staffing, laboratory-method, wcenter

Anonymous

Remedial English: Luxury or necessity?

College Composition and Communication 09.3 (1958), 153

Report of a College Composition and Communication Conference workshop, in which writing laboratories are described as substituting for remedial English at the University of Florida and Purdue University.

KEYWORDS: University of Florida, Purdue University, wcenter, basic, needs-analysis
Ruoff, James E.

The English clinic at Flounder College

College English 19.8 (1958), 348-351

A satirical look at the “clinic” phenomenon.

KEYWORDS: wcenter, trend, profession

Kastner, Harold H., Jr.

Student deficiencies and the community college dilemma

Junior College Journal 30.3 (1959), 140-142

Does not mention laboratories per se, but offers supplemental instruction model as a possible solution to underprepared students.

KEYWORDS: skill-level, deficiency, two-year, wcenter, underprepared, basic, ancillary

Cox, Martha H.; John W. Canario; James R. Cypher

Remedial English: A nation-wide survey

College Composition and Communication 11.4 (1960), 237-244

Survey of 75 institutions nationwide. “Seven schools offer remedial workshops or writing laboratories.”

KEYWORDS: basic, survey, data, wcenter, workshopping, USA

Kitzhaber, Albert R.

Freshman English: A prognosis

College English 23.6 (1962), 476-483

Kitzhaber notes that work on fundamentals has largely disappeared from the classroom, having been consigned to student self-instruction or to labs and clinics. He also notes that remediation is disappearing from four-year institutions, having been consigned to the community colleges, and thus “writing labs and clinics are being abandoned.”

KEYWORDS: future, FYC, service-course, academic, syllabus, survey, advance-placement, basic-skills, wcenter, programmed, basic, two-year, wcenter

Carlton, Charles

The English language program at San Fernando Valley State College

College Composition and Communication 14.1 (1963), 48-50

Instead of remedial courses, “a laboratory for individual tutoring has been established which is voluntary, free, and non-credit.” It’s staffed by full- and part-time English faculty, and attendance is reported on for 1960-1961.

KEYWORDS: comskills, curriculum, San Fernando Valley State College, wcenter, wcenter-use, data, basic, staffing

Tibbetts, A. M.

A short history of dogma and nonsense in the composition course

College Composition and Communication 16.2 (1965), 90-96

A cranky account, including identifying the 1950s as time for the flourishing of “clinics, reading labs, writing labs, and speaking labs” and that remedial students “got most of the attention” from the “skillists.”

KEYWORDS: FYC, dogma, profession, history, wcenter, laboratory-method, basic, comskills, basic-skills, pedagogy

Anonymous

New approaches in teaching composition

College Composition and Communication 16.3 (1965), 207-208

An account of a 1964 College Composition and Communication Conference workshop, chaired by Robert H. Moore, in which writing laboratories are discussed and endorsed.
KEYWORDS: pedagogy, trend, change, profession, approach, wcenter

McColley, Jean; Tom Hemmens

An approach to teaching writing

College Composition and Communication 17.5 (1966), 260-264

A Staffroom Interchange account of the writing laboratory at Kansas State. Focus is on developing command of sentence structure.

KEYWORDS: practice, Kansas State University, grammar, syntax, sentence, approach, pedagogy, wcenter

Bordwell, C. B.

The writing tutorial across campus

College English 26.7 (1965), 562-564

Account in the “Departmental Memo” section of a program at the University of Oregon honors college in which students are enrolled in a tutorial as a supplement to the composition classroom. The program was also being expanded outside of comp to undergrads and grad students. The account of practice is quite contemporary.

KEYWORDS: University of Oregon, tutoring, wcenter, stretch, WAC, honors, ancillary, WAC, graduate

Wright, Martha R.

Assistance in written English

College English 27.2 (1965), 164-165

Account in the “Departmental Memo” section of the program at the University of Massachusetts-Amherst. Undergraduate peer tutors work with students consigned to the “bottom group” based upon entrance exams.
KEYWORDS: tutoring, undergraduate, wcenter, University of Massachusetts Amherst, teaching fellow, basic, high-low, placement, assessment

Whitted, Dorothy A.

A tutorial program for remedial students

College Composition and Communication 18.1 (1967), 40-43

A writing lab-like program at Ohio Wesleyan University, staffed by MA students, retired teachers, and faculty wives.

KEYWORDS: basic, tutoring, program, ancillary, Ohio Wesleyan University, staffing, wcenter

Hoblitzele, Harrison

A study of freshman English: An informal survey

College English 28.8 (1967), 596-600

No mention of writing centers per se, but Harrison notes the disappearance of remedial courses because students “are being integrated into regular sections and furnished with special exercises on an individual basis by means of a programmed text (e.g., Blumenthal’s 3200).”

KEYWORDS: class-size, survey, data, textbook, linguistics, articulation, grading, change, staff, training, informal, wcenter, basic, programmed

Sandberg, Karl C.

Writing laboratories: A new approach to teaching composition

Describes an ESL writing laboratory for graduate students in economics at the University of Colorado Economics Institute.

KEYWORDS: wcenter, change, University of Colorado Economics Institute, ESL, pedagogy, change
Anonymous

Composition courses for the unprepared freshman

College Composition and Communication 20.3 (1969), 248-249

Workshop account from the College Composition and Communication Conference, including the “suggestion” that “compulsory attendance at a writing or English laboratory” be used for unprepared freshman.

KEYWORDS: wcenter, requirement, ancillary, underprepared, basic, FYC

Anonymous

Experimental writing laboratories

College Composition and Communication 22.3 (1971), 286-287

Account of a 1970 College Composition and Communication Conference workshop, primarily describing the writing lab at Muscatine Community College in Iowa. The focus and clientele are not solely remedial.

KEYWORDS: wcenter, Muscatine Community College (Iowa), two-year, basic, wcenter-use

Dow, Ronald H.

The writer’s laboratory: One approach to composition

Arizona English Bulletin 16 (Winter, 1973), 55-66

Extols the benefits of a laboratory approach to improve students’ attitudes towards writing.

KEYWORDS: wcenter, theory, learning-theory, model, Herbert Kohl, student-centered, authority, teacher-student, student-attitude
Welch, George W.

Organizing a reading and writing lab in which students teach

College Composition and Communication 25.5 (1974), 437-439

Staffroom Interchange account of a program at Miami-Dade Community College where “the lab set out to convince the student that there is a such a thing as an academic community of students and that the student himself makes learning happen, rather than that learning is something given to him like a pill or a shove.” This lab, started in 1970, is peer staffed.

KEYWORDS: wcenter, peer-evaluation, Miami-Dade Community College, student-motivation

Sutton, Doris G.; Daniel S. Arnold

The effects of two methods of compensatory freshman English

Research in Teaching of English 08.2 (1974), 241-249

Compares “the writing laboratory” with the “remedial English” or classroom approach. Lab students had higher grades in subsequent English classes and other classes than non-lab students. Retention difference was not significant.

KEYWORDS: practice, basic, conferencing, grading, current-traditional, contrast-group, gain, attrition, academic-success, grades, data, wcenter, retention-rate

Steward, Joyce S.

To like to have written: Learning the laboratory way

ADE Bulletin, No. 46 (1975), 32-41

Describes the writing laboratory at the University of Wisconsin Madison, founded in 1970.

KEYWORDS: University of Wisconsin, wcenter, basic, ancillary, wcenter-use, data
Sbaratta, Philip

Teaching composition in the portable writing laboratory

College Composition and Communication 27.2 (1976), 202-204

An account of the lab at North Shore Community College (Beverly, Massachusetts), which is “a self-contained writing laboratory, in which the only activity for the student is writing and in which the instructor serves as an editor.”

KEYWORDS: wcenter, practice, portable, North Shore Community College (Massachusetts), teacher-student, editing

Almasy, Rudolph

Instructional materials for the writing laboratory

College Composition and Communication 27.4 (1976), 400-403

A Staffroom Interchange piece on the lab at West Virginia University, where “very few of our students were remedial.” As a result, they rejected programmed instruction materials that focused on mechanical issues only.

KEYWORDS: wcenter, training, programmed, basic, MX, West Virginia University

Budz, Judith; Terry Grabar

Tutorial versus classroom in freshman English

College English 37.7 (1976), 654-666

An experimental approach to testing whether conferencing is superior to classroom instruction. Results were spotty, but so was the design.

KEYWORDS: FYC, tutorial, pre-post, gain, Fitchburg State College, data, response, feedback, wcenter, conferencing, tutoring, contrast-group
Freedman, Sarah Warshauer; Ellen W. Nold

On Budz and Grabar’s 1976 "Tutorial vs. Classroom" study

College English 38.4 (1976), 427-429

KEYWORDS: research-method, pre-post, gain, wceter, conferencing

Budz, Judith; Terry Grabar

Response to Freedman and Nold (1976).

College English 38.4 (1976), 429-430

Budz and Grabar (College English, 1976) defend their study.

KEYWORDS: research-method, pre-post, gain, wceter, conferencing

Maeroff, Gene I.

Rise in remedial work taxing colleges

New York Times (March 7, 1976), 1, 14

Describes the creation of writing centers at Case Western Reserve, Stanford, Simmons College (Massachusetts), University of Kansas, and Ohio State University, mostly to work with under-prepared students.

KEYWORDS: wceter, implementation, Case Western Reserve, Stanford University, Simmons College (Massachusetts), University of Kansas, Ohio State University, underprepared, basic

Anonymous

The writing lab: Serving students and the community

Change 06.8 (July, 1976), 46-47
Describes the work of Mary K. Croft to create a writing lab at the University of Wisconsin Stevens Point.

KEYWORDS: University of Wisconsin Stevens Point, wcenter, implementation, wcenter-design, Mary K. Croft

Dugger, Ronnie

Cooperative learning in a writing community

Change 06.8 (July, 1976), 30-33

A very full account of the Brooklyn College writing center, led by Kenneth Bruffee.

KEYWORDS: wcenter, Brooklyn College, Kenneth Bruffee, authority, tutor-training, tutoring

Meier, Patricia

A system for effective composition instruction

College Composition and Communication 28.1 (1977), 49-52

A Staffroom Interchange piece that describes the program at the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee. It is a writing lab that “is neither a remedial program for a selected population nor a drop-in or referral service; rather it is a non-traditional system for achieving the traditional objectives of a freshman composition course.” It’s quite atomistic, focusing on students’ mastery of discrete text elements.

KEYWORDS: wcenter, University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee, MX, grammar, mastery-learning, pedagogy, FYC, objective

Harris, Muriel

Making the writing lab an instructors’ resource room

College Composition and Communication 28.4 (1977), 376-378
A Staffroom Interchange piece on the lab at Purdue University, which has “become a working library for the teaching of composition.”

KEYWORDS: wcenter, teacher-resources, Purdue University, objective

Rothman, Donald L.

Tutoring in writing: Our literacy problem

College English 39.4 (1977), 484-490

Account of creating the writing center at University of California Santa Cruz, where writing should be “an act of knowing and an act of communicating.”

KEYWORDS: University of California Santa Cruz, basic, tutorial, wcenter, peer, tutor-training, commenting, needs-analysis, epistemic